Broker Summary

Source deal: Vallejo Retail Strip Center Acquisition

High-Vacancy Retail Acquisition: What Brokers Should Prepare

This is not only a retail acquisition. It is a high-vacancy value-add acquisition where the current property condition, borrower plan, bridge structure, timing, and proposed exit path need to be presented together.

$5.7M acquisition / bridge loan · Vallejo, CA · retail strip center · 150,000 SF property · 14.16 acres · high-vacancy property · acquired from a servicer · 12-month term · 60% LTC · first deed of trust

Short deal context

Rubicon funded a $5.7M acquisition / bridge loan for a 150,000 SF retail strip center on 14.16 acres in Vallejo, California.

The public deal details describe a high-vacancy property acquired from a servicer, with conventional financing unsuitable at that stage. The borrower was an experienced developer with a plan involving renovations, re-tenanting, and potential pad sales. The loan was structured with a 12-month term, 60% LTC, and a first deed of trust.

Broker relevance

For brokers, the useful point is not simply that a retail acquisition was funded. The practical value is understanding how to organize a transitional retail request so the current asset condition, borrower plan, bridge structure, and proposed exit logic are clear from the start.

What brokers should prepare:

- property size and site details
- current vacancy context
- acquisition source or seller context
- borrower experience
- renovation / re-tenanting plan
- potential pad-sale strategy, if relevant
- requested loan structure
- proposed exit path
- supporting documents

Practical broker note

This does not imply that a similar deal will qualify. It shows the kind of fact organization that can make a high-vacancy value-add acquisition easier to discuss and review.
