Source deal: Vallejo Retail Strip Center Acquisition

High-Vacancy Retail Requires More Than a Purchase Story

High-vacancy retail deals are not carried by the acquisition story alone. The useful package explains the property as it stands today, why conventional financing is unsuitable at that stage, what the borrower plans to do, and how the bridge structure fits the proposed path forward.

$5.7M acquisition / bridge loan • Vallejo, CA • 150,000 SF retail strip center • 14.16 acres • high-vacancy property • acquired from a servicer • 12-month term • 60% LTC • first deed of trust

Rubicon funded a $5,700,000 acquisition / bridge loan for a 150,000 SF retail strip center on 14.16 acres in Vallejo, California.

The public deal details describe a high-vacancy property acquired from a servicer, with conventional financing unsuitable at that stage. The borrower was an experienced developer with a plan involving renovations, re-tenanting, and potential pad sales. The loan was structured with a 12-month term, 60% LTC, and a first deed of trust.

For brokers and borrowers, the practical point is not simply that a retail acquisition was funded. The useful lesson is how a value-add retail request needs to be framed. A high-vacancy property requires clear presentation of the current condition, acquisition context, borrower plan, loan structure, timing, and proposed exit path.

This example shows how a funded-deal page can become a concise newsletter feature: source-bound, useful to the relationship network, and careful not to imply leasing success, pad-sale success, market recovery, return, or outcome.

For brokers and borrowers, this item clarifies what information should be organized when a high-vacancy value-add retail acquisition is not ready for conventional financing.

Deal Prism value: One public funded-deal source becomes a targeted newsletter feature with a sharper headline, editorial takeaway, fact strip, broker relevance, CTA, and explicit review controls.

Internal demo draft only. AI pre-screen only. Human Rubicon review required before external use.

This does not imply leasing success, repositioning success, renovation success, pad-sale success, market recovery, return, yield, approval, or outcome.
